Comments of portfolio manager

In a month dominated by sector rotation, the managers chose to further enhance the quality of the portfolio and emphasize cyclical accents. The correction in the technology sector was utilized to tactically adjust the position in Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing Company (TSMC); although some interim profits were taken, the position remains a key pillar in the compartment, anticipating structural demand for advanced chips. Additionally, the industrial pillar was strengthened with the purchase of French energy management specialist Schneider Electric and Swedish industrial supplier Atlas Copco. Both companies are essential for the electrification and energy efficiency of industry. To finance these purchases, exposure to more defensive sectors and infrastructure was reduced. For instance, the position in French construction giant Vinci was trimmed, and profits were taken on consumer goods giant Unilever, which showed less upward potential in the current market climate.
